Proposal for tender specifications

INTERNATIONAL OLIVE COUNCIL
TENDER FOR A PROMOTION CAMPAIGN FOR THE CONSUMPTION OF OLIVE OIL AND TABLE OLIVES IN THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION
TENDER SPECIFICATIONS

1. Introduction

1.1. The IOC promotional activities

The International Olive Council (IOC), based in Madrid, Spain, is an intergovernmental organization created in 1959 under the auspices of the United Nations. It is in charge of implementing the International Agreement on Olive Oil and Table Olives, 2005, the purpose of which is to promote trade, consumption and international cooperation in the fields of olive oil and table olives.

The promotion of olive products is one of the founding missions of the IOC written into Chapter I, article 1.3 of the International Agreement, which states that the general objectives of the Agreement with respect to the expansion of international trade and the promotion of olive products are:

- To promote any activities conducive to the harmonious, sustainable expansion of the world olive products economy by every means in the power of the International Olive Council in the fields of production, consumption and international trade, having regard to the ways in which they are interrelated.
- To facilitate the study and application of measures for balancing production and consumption and the establishment of procedures for information and consultation in order to enhance the transparency of the market.
- To implement measures designed to expand international trade in olive products and to adopt whatever measures are appropriate to enhance the consumption of olive oil and table olives.
- To undertake activities fostering a better understanding of the nutritional, therapeutic and other properties of olive oil and table olives.
- To maintain and amplify the role of the International Olive Council as a meeting point for all the operators in the sector and as a world documentation and information centre on the olive tree and its products.

The general objectives of IOC promotional policy are to promote the consumption of olive oil and table olives, both in traditional consumer markets and in new, high-potential ones. In the first case, the aim is to consolidate and expand consumption in order to counter the recent slowdown caused, amongst other things, by price increases in the long run; in the second case, to exploit the great opportunities offered by fast-growing, new markets.

The campaigns must be generic and will not be orientated towards promoting particular trademarks or firms. Promotion will be carried out without reference to the country or region of origin of the product and only positive messages will be transmitted.

Though campaign implementation will have to be assigned primarily to external agencies, the IOC Executive Secretariat will retain control of the following at all times: contents, methods and timing of implementation and impact assessment, and updating and focus of campaign targets. In addition, qualified members of the Secretariat will participate actively as control and support officers, as speakers and as information sources at each scheduled event.

The IOC Executive Secretariat will be involved in and control all activities. A cost effectiveness report will be drawn up for each activity in addition to a final report incorporating quantitative and qualitative remarks for assessing promotion and laying the groundwork for future programs.

Full, detailed interim and final reports will be issued. These will contain reliable import and consumption statistics and a qualitative analysis based on the monitoring of press and news media and multi-media coverage and answers to “feedback forms” distributed to participants at each planned event.

1.2. The Russian Federation

The Russian Federation has been selected as one of the priority markets for promotion in the coming years by the IOC. Prior to the promotion campaign of olive oil and table olives in Russia, a deep research of the market has been undertaken during 2009 by an external consulting firm contracted by the IOC.

Thus a tender has been called upon to select an external agency for the implementation of a promotional campaign in this market.

2. Scope of the campaign

- 2.1. A proposal should be put forward for the implementation of promotion activities by IOC in order to increase the demand of olive oil and table olives in the Russian Federation, together with a budget for each activity.
- 2.2. The present tender regards the Russian Federation and therefore the campaign should entail promotion activities taking the market as a whole.
- 2.3. Promotional activities should cover the following products: olive oil and table olives.
- 2.4. As the nature and characteristics of the Russian market are different for each one of the two products, promotional activities to be undertaken should also be different depending on the product. Therefore, there should be two campaigns in one.

3. Objectives

3.1. Olive Oil

The axis of the campaign must be: INFORMATION AND EDUCATION

- Information about its properties: Healthy product, natural and tasty.
- Education to the consumers: history, varieties, origins, types, etc.

3.2. Table Olives

The axis of the campaign must be: INCREASE OF THE CONSUMPTION

- Positioning the table olives as a part of the traditional Russian diet
- Promoting new uses and applications
- Creating and communicating new recipes
- Reminding their beneficial nutritional properties
- Making its consumption more constant along the year, beyond celebrations and feasts.

4. Desirable aspects of the campaign

The tenderers should consider some issues with regard to the nature of the promotion campaign in Russia:

DIFFERENTIATION	Each product should have its own an independent promotion strategy.
COORDINATION	Duality should not mean a lack of coordination. Avoiding duplicity is essential and therefore a single agency should manage and develop both campaigns in search of coordination and synergies.
SYNERGIES	Both strategies should have some common points and actions, what will bring economy and more efficiency.
GENERIC	According to IOC objectives, regardless of origin producers and brands, promotion activities should always be totally generic and neutral.
UMBRELLA	The campaigns must be useful for producing countries, for manufacturers and their brands, for importers and retailers. All stakeholders would be welcomed to operate in coordination with the IOC and benefit from its campaigns. Tenderers should consider what has already been done by different operator in the market. This will bring transparency, trust and efficiency.
COMPLEMENTARY	All actions from any operator are important and useful. IOC strategy will take into account what others are already doing, namely the national foreign trade promotion boards, federations and associations alike, as well as exporters and distributors.
PROGRESSIVE	Due to market nature, its huge size and complexity, a progressive promotion strategy is desirable. Starting point should have a higher profile and then be reduced along the years (objectives, awareness and budget).
ASYMMETRIC	Promoting olive oil will require a deeper-long term effort. Therefore a bigger budget should be allocated for the olive oil campaign.
LONG TERM	Increasing awareness and consumption in any market and especially in one of the size of Russia will not be easy. Only a progressive and long term strategy aimed at the adequate targets will bring results. A starting campaign should not be shorter than 3 years.
FLEXIBLE	Out of the experience of the campaigns already under way carried out by exporters, it seems adequate that all actions and results should be revised every year in order to correct deviations and to adapt messages to a changing environment.
CONVERGENT	It is recommended that two campaigns should different during year 1 and year 2 (albeit sharing certain actions) but converge in year 3.
OBJECTIVES	Tenderers should establish desirable measurable objectives in terms of awareness to be hit at the end of the campaign, as well as the
CONTROL	The campaigns should include control procedures as to measure the level of implementation of activities and objectives as the promotion takes place.

5. Target audience

The campaign should be addressed mainly to:
